Optional reading related to 5th grade study

In fifth grade social studies, you will study exploration and early colonization of the Americas. Biographies of famous people will give you a head start in history. The “Landmark” books give plenty of detail about the early days of our country. If you prefer lots of pictures, look for Columbus by the d’Aulaires, and Where Do You Think You’re Going, Christopher Columbus and Around the World in a Hundred Years: from Henry the Navigator to Magellan by Jean Fritz. Another book for all ages about Columbus is Fiona Macdonald’s You Wouldn’t Want to Sail With Christopher Columbus! Many books were written for the 500th anniversary of his first voyage: I, Columbus: My Journal 1492-3 by Peter and Connie Roop, Follow the Dream by Peter Sis, and The Discovery of the Americas by Betsy and Giulio Maestro. (The latter book also has an activity book to go with it.) Of course, Columbus is only one of many explorers you’ll be discussing. Ask the librarian what is available on the Vikings, Prince Henry the Navigator, Magellan, and Sir Francis Drake. The Maestros’ book Exploration and Conquest: the Americas after Columbus is one place to start.

Your social studies unit begins with Native Americans. The librarian can direct you to the books about various tribes and individuals. Don’t forget the beautiful picture books of myths and legends about Raven and Coyote; Paul Goble; Gerald McDermott, and Tomi DePaola have also done some fine work in this area.

If you have not read Johanna Hurwitz’s Aldo Applesauce series check them out! The “Blossom” family books by Betsy Byars are also funny; the first one is The Not-Just-Anybody Family. The sequels all have the family name “Blossom” somewhere in the title.

JUST FOR FUN

- Alexander The Cat Who Wished to Be a Man; Time Cat; The Book of Three series
- Avi Poppy and Rye, series
- Bishop Twenty and Ten
- Boston The Children of Green Knowe (series)
- Burnett The Little Princess; The Secret Garden

Burnford	The Incredible Journey

Books and materials on the Native American peoples can be found under Dewey Decimal Number 970.01 and 970.3.

If you cannot find these particular book titles, use the Dewey Decimal Numbers to get to the shelf you are interested in; there will be something wonderful waiting for you. The librarian is always happy to help.

Go to the public library this summer and ask if the library has reading lists for your special tastes. You know that they have far more books than I could put on one list!

Remember religious reading; God doesn't take a vacation from you - don't take one from Him. Check the Dewey Number 200 shelves for Bible stories and JB (biographies) for lives of the saints and other good people.

See if Barnes and Noble, and Politics and Prose have any summer activities planned.

HAVE A HAPPY SUMMER, READING!
